

On the weekends Jake enjoys to go out to the bar with his friends, however, they tend to spend a lot of money. This is hard for Jake because he's trying to save his money to move, additionally, he's also short on money because of his job as an Uber driver.

Because they forget how much each person spent, Jake and his friends argue about how much they pay. Jake gets very upset because he's short on money and doesn't want to pay more than what he got.

After a long night out, Jake scrolls through his instagram and finds an App called Bill Splitter, an App that is designed to split the bill between each person evenly and quickly.

Jake is thrilled that he found this new app. He tries it for the first time when his parents come to visit him in Omaha, Nebraska. Jake figures out that Bill Splitter works great and tends to use it with his friends.

Jake is out with his friends, happier than usual, because he knows that Bill Splitter will make everyone not argue about how much each person pays.

The guys use the app and it works great once again, Bill Splitter made the payment even for everyone so then everyone went home happy.
